R Task 12a. Read and translate the text.

The Army classifies branches as combat arms, combat support arms, combat service support branches. The officers, appointed into these branches, are known as Artillery officers, Infantry officers, Intelligence officers etc.

Combat arms are directly involved in combat operations (Infantry, Armor, Artillery). Combat support branches provide operational assistance to the combat arms; engagement in combat when it is necessary; logistical and administrative support (Corps of Engineers, Signal Corps, Army Aviation, Chemical Corps, Military Police). Service support branches provide logistical and administrative support, but their personnel are not directly engaged in fighting (Finance Corps, Medical Corps, Ordnance Corps, Transportation Corps, Chaplain Corps etc.).
